50X1-HUM

1. Although there is no Auxiliary Fire Service, as such, small teams of men in all factories and large buildings, such as municipal or local government offices, have been trained in fire fighting by a section of the military engineers. These men, who have been given only rudimentary equipment, carry out no other duties apart from fire watching.
2. Other than these fire fighters, no sections of the population have received any type of civil defense training or exercises.
3. All the air raid shelters in Constanta were cleared immediately after the 1939-1946 war. However, since that date nothing has been done to them and no new shelters constructed.
4. The same lack of training and shelter construction applies also to the port area.
